Access to personal data about your child(ren)

Where your child(ren) is/are under the age of 12 it is usually assumed that they are not able to make decisions about their personal data. That right is usually given to parents or a guardian. To access the personal data relating to your child(ren) you will need to follow the same procedure as you would to access your own personal data.

If your child requests access to their personal data, then we will normally refer that request to you for confirmation before releasing the data.

Once your child(ren) reach(es) the age of 12, in most cases they are assumed to be able to make their own decisions about their personal data. This means that we will not refer any request for access to their own data. Similarly, if you wish to make a request for data about you child(ren) we may refer that request to them for confirmation.

It is worth knowing that under the terms of the Data Protection Act (2018) parents do not have an automatic right to access about their child(ren) through a subject access request.
